ARTHEURIAN LOCALITIES.

As far as the Brythonic tribes extended, there we find traces of Arthur. The Gauls knew him not; Kine, Ois, Cuchullin, were the great Gaelic heroes. But the British tradition reached from Brittany to the North, and to British tradition Arthur came as a demi-god. Perhaps he was regarded as a great light that shone before a coming darkness, a great leader who rushed his people to one brilliant period of success before they were finally paralysed by Teutonic invasion. The Welsh claim Arthur, the Cornish, the Bretons, the Lowland Scotch: Cornwall, possessing Tintagel as an asset of faith, claims his birth; Somerset, at Cadbury by the river Camel, claims Camelot; the Cornish Camelford points to his last battle, and Glastonbury has boasted of his grave. Tintagel's claim is almost certainly right, so far as there is any certainty in Arthurian legend, and a great deal may be said for the Somerset claim; but for the scene of the last battle and the burial we must look elsewhere than to Camelford and Glastonbury. The last battle, by all authentic tradition, was fought against Picts; and what would Picts have been doing in Cornwall? The grave at Glastonbury, it must be owned with regret, is generally understood to have been a monkish fable. It is not pleasant for a West of England man to surrender these two Arthurian localities; but truth is truth, and Scotland has a claim to them which cannot lightly be put aside.

We will assume that Arthur was a Romanised Briton, born in the late fifth century at Tintagel; his name itself being possibly a Celtic rendering of the Latin Artorius. He became the champion of his race against encroaching Saxons, North Country Picts, and wandering Pagan hordes who fought for lust of plunder. Against these it is probable that Arthur sought to maintain a semi-Romanised, partially Christianised civilisation. He was credited with twelve great battles in which he proved victorious; some of these were certainly in Scotland, and the last, that of Badon Hill, probably in Wessex. All the localities have been much debated, and for the most part the result is confusion. These triumphs are supposed to have established his rule on a firm foundation, so that for many years the British knew comparative peace and good government. A thirteenth battle, in which he lost his life fighting against his own nephew Mordred, has usually been located at Slaughter Bridge, close to the Cornish Camelford; and that tradition, fortified by the guide-books and by local patriotism, is not likely to die an easy death. Malory, and T. Arnold, after him, both place this battle in the West of England; but the traditions they embody spring from a time when the Celts of Wales, and "West Wales" were forgetting the former extent of their tribes, and were limiting their racial pride to a part of the country that was still free from the Teutons. The fact that this last battle was fought against the Picts, and against Mordred, is almost conclusive as to its locality; we cannot bring a large Pictish army so far south as Cornwall. Arthur's sister had married Llwllo or Lot, of the Lothians, and we have reason to believe that Arthur was familiar with this part of Scotland.

His last battle is always stated to have been fought at Camlan; and this name has diverted South-Country writers to the Camels of Cornwall and Somerset. But the Celtic cam in place-names is sufficiently common; it signifies crooked, and we find it in a number of river-names throughout the country. Mordred had become a chief-tain of the Picts, he is sometimes spoken of as King of Scotland; and in his opposition to Arthur, who probably claimed some suzerain rights over the Lowlands, he seems to have gathered together a large force of Picts, Scots, with auxiliaries, as appears likely, of Britons and Saxons. If Arthur's rule was just and firm, there would have been many ready to oppose him; besides the many who were always glad to fight for fighting's sake. The battle, whose date is given as 642, was probably fought at Camlan (still pronounced Camlan) on the river Caron, near Falkirk. Arthur was defeated—it is likely that his forces were greatly outnumbered, and he died, either on the spot, or of a wound then received. It is interesting to note that, not many miles distant, is an earthenwork still known as Mordred's Castle; and that at Caron, nearer still, was formerly a mound, or cairn known as Arthur's One (oven). We know for certain that his forces were greatly outnumbered, and he died, either on the spot, or of a wound then received. A black and white photograph showing a dense, textured surface. The texture is highly irregular, with a mix of light and dark patches, suggesting a rough or fibrous material. The lighting is somewhat uneven, with brighter areas on the left and darker, more shadowed areas on the right. The overall appearance is that of a close-up of a wall, a piece of heavy fabric, or perhaps a large, textured object like a sculpture.

HONGKONG, SATURDAY, SEPT. 26, 1908.

'A REASONED OPINION.'

The Hon. Mr. MURRAY STEWART is to be heartily congratulated upon the part he took in the debate in the Legislative Council on Thursday when it fell to his lot to introduce two motions which practically amounted to votes of censure, the first on an Imperial official, the second on the local Building Authority. All the honours rested with him. The manner in which he exposed the wretched political manoeuvring of Colonel Sizer in the opinion debate in the House of Commons, when the newly appointed

Under-Secretary of State for the Colonies went out of his way to jibe and flout at the Colony of Hongkong, was a very masterly piece of work. Coming from a man who delights in clear-cut, logical analysis, Mr. Murray Stewart could not help but present his case in the dry light of clear, dialectical reasoning and logic.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The German Mail of the 26th August was delivered in London on the 22nd inst.

To-day begins the Jewish New Year,

5669, and all Jewish firms in the Colony are holding holiday.

"Uncle Joe" Cannon recently taunted Mr. W. J. Bryan with being a millionaire and Bryan responded by showing that he was only worth a paltry $150,000.

During a reception given to Mr. W. J.

Bryan, the Democratic candidate for the Presidency, at Wheeling, Va., an enthusiastic woman kissed him. The lady was arrested and fined.

Manila was swept by a big storm on September 19th, evidently coming within the oncoming radius of the big typhoon which afterwards traversed the China Sea and broke over Tientsin. Some little damage was done in the city, but the heavy rains were looked upon as a Godsend by the Sanitary authorities for they swept away a lot of pestiferous rubbish.

The Victoria Cinematograph continues to attract large audiences every evening.

The pictures are up to their usual high standard, while Miss Macdonald, the talented singer and dancer, is already a great favourite with the patrons. To-night and tomorrow night two excellent films, "The Lady Barret," and "The Shipowner's Daughter," will be shown in addition to the usual programme.

An exceptionally good programme has been arranged for this evening at the Alexandra Cinema-theatre. Miss Tina

Lacour will appear in entirely new songs while Professor Byrd will mystify with quite a fresh programme of magic. In the second part he will be assisted by Miss Lacour in his presentation of "Resuscitation," a new and capital illusion. A unique set of pictures will also be shown.

It is said that the official estimate of Japan's foreign trade for the current year is that the unfavourable balance will amount to $3 or $5 million yen. At present the figure is only $3 million, and all experience justifies expectation that exports will predominate during the next four months. But, on the other hand, there are from $5 to $6 million yen worth of machines and general goods in the bonded warehouses. These, says the Japan Mail, have to be gradually taken delivery of, and they will probably exceed the relief afforded by surplus exports between now and December.

There is apparent a disposition on the part of a good many people in Manila to get panicky over the unfortunate outbreak of cholera in the city within the last few days. The situation looks a bit serious, just at present, it is true, but there are many indications that it will not last. In the first place the campaign against it is being well organized and in the second place the outbreak seems to be rather sporadic in its nature and the chances are that the prompt action of the authorities will prevent it from becoming well rooted.

At any rate, the wisest plan is to be unperturbed.—Cable News-American.

Two or three important books are promised from Mr. Murray shortly. One is the "Military Memoirs" of General Sir

Joseph Thackeray, G.C.B. It is based on the journals and letters of the gallant soldier, and is written by Colonel Wylie,

C.B. General Thackeray was born in 1781 and died in 1859. He was an officer in the 16th Hussars during the Cornish campaign, which will always be associated with the military services of Sir John Moore. He afterwards saw much hard fighting under the Duke of Wellington in the Peninsula campaign, and was present at the Battles of Vittoria, the Pyrenees, Orthes, Toulouse, and lost his left arm at Waterloo. He afterwards saw much active service in India in the first Afghan war, the Gwalior campaign, and in both the wars against the Sikhs, and rose to be second in command to Lord Gough in the Army of the Punjab. Unlike the majority of soldiers, Sir Joseph from his earliest days kept a diary in which he jotted down his impression at the moment, of men as well as of battles. The book, therefore, pro-

ECZEMA COVERED
FACE AND CHESTLittle Boy Suffered Very Badly—Under Medical Care for Weeks—Became Steadily Worse—Doctor Said It Would Last for Years—One Box of Cuticura Cured Him.MOTHER RECOMMENDS CUTICURA TO FRIENDS

"Two years ago my little son was suffering very badly from eczema. I took him to a doctor who attended him some weeks and still he got worse. Sores completely covered his face and chest. Being dissatisfied with his treatment, I took him to another. I tried his remedies and still my poor boy was not getting any better. The doctor would not go away for years. One morning I saw an advertisement of Cuticura and made up my mind then and there, to give it a trial. I purchased one box of Cuticura Ointment and one bottle of Cuticura Soap. After using them the first few days, one saw a great change. The eczema was completely gone in three weeks. We still have some of the Ointment left and continue to use Cuticura Soap. I have always used my Cuticura Soap and I recommend it to all my friends. I feel my duty. Mrs. Phyllis Duke, 36, London Road, Slough, Middlesex, July 2, 1907. Sent to nearest dealer for free Cuticura Book on Treatment of Skin Diseases."
